

August 21, 1964 - 501

Dr. Jannita G. Curtis of Phoenix, Arizona, has been hired by the University of the Pacific as an assistant professor of education for the 1964-65 school term beginning in September.

Mrs. Curtis, 44, has lived most of her life around the Phoenix area. She graduated from Phoenix High School and received her B.A., M.A., and Ed.D. degrees from Arizona State University at Tempe, Arizona. She has been employed in the past by Phoenix School District #1 as an elementary school teacher.

Her major field of concentration has been in elementary school curriculum. Last year she worked in the Bay Area helping to try out new reading books in the Berkeley School System.

The new assistant professor at the University of the Pacific has toured Mexico as a guest of the Mexican Government, speaking to schools, churches, and meetings. She is a member of the Arizona State Education Association, and holds a life membership in the National Education Association.

Mrs. Curtis lives in Phoenix with her husband and child, and will be moving to Stockton in the near future.
